"What is the subject of your graduating essay? Something practical, I hope."

Oster Says, "Live Today."
"The day of man's salvation is today. Make the limit of your life the twenty-four hours of the day; live earnestly and you will have a vaccine that will insure you against all morbid thoughts. The first two hours of a day determine the day. If you have been romping with the younger Aphrodite the night before you will be as bleary-eyed as a fish when you get up, and the day will be lost."—Sir William Oster, M. D., in address at Yale.

Appreciative Guest.
A somewhat parsimonious couple in Edinburgh invited a friend to dine with them on a Monday, and when the joint was laid on the table it proved to be the remains of Sunday's roast heated up. Whereupon the guest remarked that this appeared to be "an" old friend with a new face. "This, however, did not prevent his doing justice to the fare provided, and upon departing he said: "Well, good-night; I've had an enjoyable evening, and you have always the consolation that it hasn't cost you much."

CONVICT LABOR FOR IRRIGATION

E. B. HOWARD TELLS OF GREAT RESULTS ACCOMPLISHED IN COLORADO

EMPLOYMENT OF CONVICT LABOR

Results in Millions of Dollars Improvement to Farm Lands and Roads—Can Be Duplicated in Oklahoma

E. B. Howard, secretary and member of the Oklahoma State Board of Public Affairs, has returned from a vacation trip of three weeks, spent in Colorado. Because of his observation of the highly successful irrigation projects in Colorado Mr. Howard is an enthusiast over the subject of irrigation for Oklahoma.

"During my vacation," he says, "I took the opportunity to investigate and study the great benefits irrigation has been to the state of Colorado, and I am more than ever impressed with the suggestion that I made a year ago, relative to devising some plan for using our convict labor and placing Oklahoma farms in position to be irrigated during such seasons as we have had this year."

"While in Colorado I inspected several farms and tracts of land which have been benefited by irrigation and from the nature of the soil that I saw and a study of the conditions in Oklahoma, I am confident that irrigation would be entirely feasible in this state, and that nothing like the amount of water would be required for our purposes as I found to be necessary at these places, for the reason that a study of the rainfall in Oklahoma since its first settlement shows that every year there is sufficient precipitation to raise bumper crops were it properly distributed and were we to place ourselves in position to preserve the water that falls in the winter and spring and early summer months, and that good crops could be insured each year.

"There is no doubt but what Oklahoma soil is more productive than many tracts of land I saw in Colorado which were producing immense crops by reason of irrigation."

"In Denver I inspected the display of the agricultural products of that state, and especially those which had been produced on irrigated land. It was a surprise to see the quality and quantity of different kinds of crops, such as wheat, corn, oats, sugar beets, etc., that are being produced in that state on land which, previous to the days of irrigation, would grow nothing save short grass and cactus."

"After an investigation of these plants and other products and a study of the conditions in Colorado, I can see great possibilities for Oklahoma agricultural interests if our people will only take up the matter of irrigation and a preservation of our rainfall."

"There may be other ways in which it would be better to do this work, but figuring that we have several hun-

STATE SCHOOL LAND COMMISSIONERS ADVERTISE ARKANSAS RIVER BED LANDS FOR LEASING

Two miles of the bed of the Arkansas river, immediately adjacent to Turkey Island, and a large portion of school land located in seven different counties, were ordered to be advertised for lease for oil and gas purposes by the school land commissioners. None of the land to be advertised for lease has been passed on by the oil and gas experts of the school land department. The leasing of the lands is authorized by the commissioners in response to requests received from prospectors, who are willing to give bond, lease the land and put down test wells.

The lands to be leased are: Section 16, township 12 north, range 6 east, Lincoln county; west half section 56, township 12 north, range 6 dred men in our penitentiaries and reformatories for whom we must necessarily provide means of employment and believing that it would be better to use these men in improving our agricultural interests, which at the same time would mean the improvement of our towns and cities, until some better means of doing this can be found, I have made up my mind to urge upon the people of this state to take up this matter and keep it before the public until such time as some kind of arrangements are made to put our farms in better condition than at the present, and I urge a movement that will immediately put these unemployed men who are being supported by the state, to the work of building dams, ponds or some other arrangements for preserving the moisture that we need during the months of July and August, when we have a dry year in this country.

"I believe Oklahoma could take up no better slogan than that which has been recently broached in Missouri of 'WATER FOR EVERY FARM.'

"It has been suggested that reservoirs be established along rivers to take care of the overflow waters. Perhaps that scheme could be carried out, but why shouldn't a state commission or someone, take up the subject and work out a plan? Perhaps it might be better for each county to handle its own problem, but be that as it may, let's do something! I think it would be a mistake for us to let the lesson of this season be wasted. We are going to have such seasons as this occasionally, and we might as well make up our minds to do what we can to reduce the evils by making reasonable preparations for preserving our water and having it at such times as this when it would mean so much to our people and to this state."

"In addition to studying the matter of irrigation while away, I also took occasion to observe the many good roads built by the state of Colorado, with their convict labor. These good roads have been one of Colorado's greatest assets and have not only meant a great convenience to the citizens but have attracted the investment of thousands of dollars in that state."

"I talked with people who had charge or had an interest in the work during the time these roads were being built by the convicts of Colorado and without exception found that everyone and every person cognizant of what had been done, not only praised the officials of the State for their work, but assured me that the very fact of working these convicts out on the roads in the fresh air and the better treatment, made of them, when their terms expired, better men, and those whose terms had not yet expired, better prisoners."

"In fact, from every standpoint, Colorado is greatly benefited by reason of working convicts upon her roads, and why should Oklahoma not do likewise?"

"The conditions are such that as good, if not better, roads can be made for a minimum cost and a minimum amount of work, as compared with the roads that it was necessary for Colorado to build through her canyons and mountains."

"Good roads and a practical application of some scheme or other, yet to be figured out, of irrigation, would be the greatest thing that Oklahoma can do for herself. It would not only assure to our farmers, crops each year, but would assure to every mechanic and laborer in this state, work at his own trade in the future, with good roads over which to transport the products of our irrigated farms. The improvement by reason of these roads and this irrigation would mean yearly a great deal more to our state than some of our rich mineral interests to which we pay so much attention at the present time."

"I suggest that the people of Oklahoma take up the matter of good roads and irrigation and that no stone be left unturned until both are an accomplished fact, and in this suggestion I ask that every man in this state, who is interested in this movement, either communicate with me or in some way start an agitation and keep at it until these things are an accomplished fact."
